

Licensing & Tech Transfer

Intellectual property can be a valuable asset, even if used by someone other than the registered owner. Licensing intellectual property, when done correctly, can maximize the value of your intellectual property assets, and create lucrative revenue streams.

Drafting an intellectual property license agreement is a complex task that requires knowledgeable attorneys who can advise as to appropriate license terms whether you are the licensor or licensee.

Our attorneys have drafted and negotiated license agreements for all intellectual property mediums, and for projects ranging from medical devices to aerospace technology. Additionally, our attorneys have counseled universities and not-for-profit entities to transfer technology from the research laboratory into the business world. Our attorneys will help you analyze your intellectual property portfolio to help you take advantage of licensing opportunities to generate additional value from your intellectual property.
